To the Citizens of The United States,

I am a soldier currently serving this country. I am stationed at Fort Hood. I have been soldier for fourteen years and have served faithfully in Kosovo, Kuwait, and Iraq. However, I have come to realize that perhaps this country of my birth, is no longer worth defending.

What makes me say such a thing? Look around you! We are a nation of good for nothing brainless hypocrites!

Do you know that our government is currently trying to deport a family from Germany who is seeking asylum from persecution? The Romeike family wants to home-school their children, which is illegal in Germany, and so have fled the oppression of their homeland and came to The United States seeking freedom! Do we, as Americans, not see this a good thing. Do we not believe in granting freedom to those who want it!

However, what does our government do? They, Obama and Eric Holder, are actively trying to deport this family! This regime is bending over backwards to grant citizenship to millions of illegal immigrants, but is actively seeking to destroy a family fleeing real persecution!

Do you know that many of our fellow citizens, who work for the government, are being furloughed while Obama and John Kerry are continuing to send money, our money, to terrorists groups, such as Al-Qaeda, in Syria! Did you know that the Defense Department is lavishing free money upon NATO, supposedly for missile defense, but we have to tell Grandma and Grandpa that we can't pay their Social Security! This is the definition of hypocrisy!

Do you know that in schools across the country communists teachers are indoctrinating our children to believe that they have no right to own a gun! That they are teaching our children that homosexual marriage is okay! That distributing the wealth is better than distributing opportunity! Our schools have become nothing but communist indoctrination camps! Soon our children will be saying, "Hail Obama, Great Leader!"

There are many more things which I could say but I think these are enough to get the point across. Our country is no longer worth defending!

You, my fellow Americans, are the ones to blame. Continue watching television, continue shopping for things which you can't afford, continue going about your lives as if there is nothing wrong; however, God is going to judge this country! He is doing it even now! The storms, rumors of war, and droughts are only the beginning of the judgment coming upon this nation!

First off, I would like to applaud you guys for being the only news source that produces a non-biased viewpoint on America's current state of affairs. On to the reason I am writing. What is the point in voting on the presidential election when both Romney and Obama basically "bat for the same team"?

I was always told in school that you could just write in a name as well but I have never seen that option on actual ballots. Also what is the percentage of people who actually vote? It's really easy to be apathetic about voting when there's so much crooked stuff going on behind the scenes. Thanks for your time and keep spreading the good word. I am really happy you all are printing news, finally something other than the internet!

Mr. Jones and the magazine crew, Hope this letter reaches you all. I have no computer, but damn I would love one to follow you folks. TODAY IS A GREAT DAY. Just got my hands on your magazine at my local liquor store (don't drink, just get cigs). I have heard Mr. Jones many times on Coast to Coast AM and always agreed with the message he brings. Now the magazine, SPOT ON FOLKS. Great! Keep it up and the pressure on. My father served the US of A, as did I. I live some 50 miles south of Austin in Converse, TX. If there is anything I can do to help you folks, please let me. I have a lot to offer, 50 years old but my aim is true.

No matter the views of anyone, you are really setting the standard. What a great crew you all must be.

I don't think what you all have can be found in many people's work ethic these days.

Also, I did not expect to find some of the advertisers in the magazine that were there; I will definitely be ordering some of their products or services - it actually is an added bonus instead of a detractor!!

This is going to make me take my wife on a vacation to visit and see Austin, I wonder how many more of your readers this is persuading to do that? It would be good for the Austin City Council to know the affect your magazine might have. Keep up the great work!

MOTHER SUES NYPD FOR PEPPER-SPRAYING BABIES

written by: KURT NIMMO

A mother has sued the New York Police Department for using pepper-spray on her 2-year-old and 4-year-old children after cops accused her of turnstile jumping.

Marilyn Taylor filed a lawsuit in federal court against the NYPD and Officers Maripily Clase, Suranjit Dey and Jermaine Hodge, according to Courthouse News Service.

On August 9, according to Taylor, police confronted her as she prepared to board a Manhattan-bound L train. "The aggressiveness of the officers' demeanors had upset the 4-year-old daughter, and her mother bent down to console her and tell her, 'everything will be OK,' the complaint states.

The police confronted her on suspicion of skipping a fare after they saw Taylor pushing a stroller through a service entrance instead of going through a turnstile.

In response, Officer Dey pepper-sprayed Taylor and her family. "The pepper-spray caused the children to scream out and choked the two-year old, who went into fits of vomiting," the complaint states. Taylor was knocked to her knees and nearly fell off the subway platform.

The police then arrested Taylor and continued to abuse her. "Ms. Taylor was then placed in handcuffs as the minor children cried in fear and pain." She claims Officers Hodge and Dey pushed her down the stairway so violently she suffered bruised wrists from the handcuffs and injury to her lower back.

"After the attack, mother and father suffered ongoing eye injuries and all three children suffer emotional harms, and are now afraid to ride the subways and become afraid when they see police officers. The 4-year-old cried herself to sleep for weeks, and after the incident the 2-year-old began waking up in the night crying for her mother," the complaint states.

Following the incident, Taylor says police continued to harass her. "Since the incident, plaintiffs have suffered repeated harassment from the officer defendants, forcing them to avoid the MTA through the Atlantic Avenue stop," according to the complaint.

The Taylor family is seeking punitive damages for civil rights violations, battery, assault, negligence, and violations of the New York State and U.S. Constitution.

US HOUSEHOLDS ON FOODSTAMPS HITS RECORD HIGH

written by: ZEROHEDGE.COM

Record Dow, record S&P, record debt, record plunge in gold and now: record U.S. households on foodstamps. What's not to like? While the recent gold selloff may be confusing to everyone, one can scratch off some 23 million U.S. households—the all-time-high number that received foodstamps in January as reported by the USDA—as the likely sellers. This is not irrational especially when one considers that the average monthly benefit to each household dropped to a record low of $274.04. This number probably ignores, for good reason, the once -every-four-years fringe benefits of Obamaphones and other made-in-China trinkets.

"I do not believe that we are free to denounce the evil at Boston and cheer on the evil our government perpetrates overseas. We must denounce both or risk being the worst hypocrites on the planet"

Is the Boston Bombing the “Moral Equivalent” of Drone Strikes?

written by: Bill Anderson

I have been thinking this through for a while. President Obama was rightly outraged at what happened at the Boston Marathon and I hope the perpetrators are brought to justice. At the same time, however, Barack Obama presides over bomb attacks on civilians, attacks that occur without warning, and attacks that not only kill alleged “militants,” but women, children, and the elderly, especially when the bombings are launched at weddings, which one would think would allegedly be a joyous celebration just as the Boston Marathon has been. While Obama demands justice in the Boston bombing, he is silent about his own role in setting off bombs in overseas countries. If Sen. Lindsey Graham is correct and the U.S. drones have killed about 4,700 people abroad, then we are talking about something that dwarfs the horror of what happened at Boston.

I am not speaking of tit-for-tat. However, I am sure that the horror that people in Muslim countries experience at a drone strike is every bit as awful as what people experienced in Boston April 15, 2013. I do not believe that we are free to denounce the evil at Boston and cheer on the evil our government perpetrates overseas. We must denounce both or risk being the worst hypocrites on the planet.

Retired Army Captain Warns DHS Acquisitions are 'bold threat of war' Against the American People

Says Americans may have to prepare to defend themselves and the U.S. Constitution against the Obama administration's coup against the people

In March, retired United States Army Captain Terry M. Hestilow publicly voiced grave concerns over the Department of Homeland Security's absurd purchases and solicitations, posting a letter he sent to Sen. John Cornyn (R-TX) on Facebook labeling the recent appropriation of weapons and ammo a "bold threat of war" against citizens of the United States.

"It is with gravest concern that I write to you today concerning the recent appropriation of weapons by the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) that can only be understood as a bold threat of war by that agency, and the Obama administration, against the citizens of the United States of America," the decorated retired Army Captain's letter begins.

Referring to the DHS' solicitations for over two billion rounds of ammunition and recent purchase of almost 3,000 mine-resistant ambush protected armored personnel carriers as "a tyrannical threat against the Constitution" and a deliberate attempt to defund the Department of Defense, the retired Army Captain asked Sen. Cornyn to honor his oath to the American people and the U.S. Constitution and "to demand in clear terms that the Administration cannot ignore, that the Department of Homeland Security immediately surrender their newly appropriated weapons of war to the Department of Defense (DoD)."

"Significant is the fact," Captain Hestilow wrote, "that at the same time the Obama administration is arming his DHS for war within the limits of the United States against the People of the United States in accordance with his 2008 campaign speech claiming,

'We cannot continue to rely only on our military in order to achieve the national security objectives that we've set. We've gotta (sic) have a civilian national security force that's just as powerful, just as strong, just as well funded [as the United States military]'- Candidate Barack Obama, 2008."

In addition to calling for the dismantling and dissolving of the DHS, he called the purchases a "glaring threat of war against our nation's citizens." Hestilow says the actions "can only be understood as a tyrannical threat against the Constitution of the United States of America."

"If left unresolved," Hestilow speculates, "the peace loving citizens who have sworn to defend the United States Constitution 'against all enemies, both foreign and domestic' are left no option except to prepare to defend themselves, and the U.S. Constitution, against this Administration's 'coup' against the People and the foundations of liberty fought for and defended for the past 238 years. We have no choice if we honor our oaths."

The former Army Captain cited Adolf Hitler's gradual then sudden rise to power as evidence of the outcome of allowing such an agency free rein:

"One needs only to look to the rise of Adolf

Retired United States Army Captain Terry M. Hestilow

Hitler, and his associated DHS organizations, the SA and the SS, of 1932-1934, to see the outcome of allowing an agency of government this kind of control over the free citizens of a nation. The people of Germany could not have imagined, until it was too late, the danger of allowing a tyrant this kind of power. We must not be so naïve as to think it will not happen to us as well if we remain passive toward this power grab by the Marxist Obama administration!”

His Facebook post garnered unprecedented support. Within a day, Captain Hestilow said it received over 3,000 shares, in addition to lassoing in 994 new friend requests. He also encouraged others to copy and properly amend the letter to send to their own senators and members of the U.S. House.

The retired Army Captain’s message followed a letter penned by 15 Congressmen asking the DHS if the ammo purchases were part of a strategic effort to deny the American people access to ammunition.

“The extraordinary level of ammunition purchases made by Homeland Security seems to have, in states such as my own, created an extreme shortage of ammunition to the point where many gun owners are unable to purchase any,” California Congressman Doug LaMalfa wrote in the letter.

Concerns that the DHS is engaged in a domestic arms buildup against the People have also been echoed by notable political figures and such mainstream publications as Forbes Magazine, who in March 2013 published an article calling for a “national conversation” on the topic.

Former Alaska Governor Sarah Palin was recently portrayed by media as a “conspiracy theorist” after she posted a remark on Facebook warning that imminent financial collapse could be the reason “why the Feds are stockpiling bullets in case of civil unrest.”

Similar concerns were also made public by Fox Business host Lou Dobbs when he asked NRA president Wayne LaPierre, during his March 4 broadcast, about the bizarre solicitations.

As an overwhelming number of Americans grew distressed over the curious purchases, DHS Secretary Janet Napolitano declared in April that the agency hadn’t responded to the allegations because she found them “so inherently unbelievable” that allegedly “it was hard to ascribe credibility to them.”

“If I might say in my own defense, we just couldn’t believe that anyone would believe those allegations, and so, let me be clear — absolutely not true,” Big Sis, as she will forever be known, stated when asked about the purchases at a House hearing in April.

A recent report that the DHS holds a $2 million contract with a firing range target manufacturer that produces shooting targets of armed pregnant women, children and elderly gun owners depicted in residential settings has also not helped suppress speculation of a DHS arms buildup against the People.

Despite reassurances, the fact that the DHS has been accumulating a veritable ammunition and firearm stockpile domestically – purchasing profane amounts of riot gear, armored military vehicles, bulletproof checkpoints, and some 7,000 fully automatic assault rifles – cannot be denied.

And as we saw during the martial law takeover of Watertown, Mass. following the Boston Marathon bombings, the establishment is itching to play with its toys at the expense of citizens’ civil liberties.

provide to you, the elected representatives of the People, justification for recent purchases of almost 3,000 mine-resistant ambush-protected (MRAP) armored personnel carriers, 1.6 billion rounds of ammunition (with associated weapons), and other weapons systems, when, in fact, the DHS has no war mission or war making authority within the limits of the United States of America.

Significant is the fact that at the same time the Obama administration is arming his DHS for war within the limits of the United States against the People of the United States in accordance with his 2008 campaign speech

...the peace loving citizens who have sworn to defend the United States Constitution “against all enemies, both foreign and domestic”

Here is retired United States Army Captain Terry M. Hestilow’s letter to Sen. Cornyn in its entirety:

The Honorable Senator John Cornyn,
State of Texas

United States Senate
517 Hart Senate Office Building
Washington, D.C. 20510

Re: Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and that agencies preparation for war against citizens of the United States of America.

Dear Senator Cornyn,

It is with gravest concern that I write to you today concerning the recent appropriation of weapons by the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) that can only be understood as a bold threat of war by that agency, and the Obama administration, against the citizens of the United States of America. To date, DHS has been unwilling to claiming,

“We cannot continue to rely only on our military in order to achieve the national security objectives that we’ve set. We’ve gotta (sic) have a civilian national security force that’s just as powerful, just as strong, just as well funded [as the United States military]”– Candidate Barack Obama, 2008.

the Obama administration is deliberately defunding, overextending, and hollowing the Department of Defense; the only legitimate agency of the U.S. government with a war mission.

This act of the Obama administration stands as a glaring threat of war against our nation’s citizens! This act of the Obama administration can only be understood as a tyrannical threat against the Constitution of the United States of America! If left unresolved, the peace loving citizens who have sworn to defend the United States Constitution “against all enemies, both foreign and domestic” are left no option except to prepare to defend themselves, and the U.S. Constitution, against this Administration’s “coup” against the People and the foundations of liberty fought for and defended for the past 238 years. We have no choice if we honor our oaths.

The only proper response to this threat against the American people is for the representatives of the People, the members of the U.S. House and Senate, to demand in clear terms that the Administration cannot ignore, that the Department of Homeland Security immediately surrender their newly appropriated weapons of war to the Department of Defense (DoD). Further, since the DHS has assumed a position in the Administration to enforce the tyrannical acts of this president against the People of the United States against the limits of the United States Constitution, it remains for the United States Congress to exercise its limiting power in the balancing of powers established by our founding fathers, to disestablish and dissolve the DHS as soon as possible. One needs only to look to the rise of Adolf Hitler, and his associated DHS organizations, the SA and the SS, of 1932-1934, to see the outcome of allowing an agency of government this kind of control over the free citizens of a nation. The people of Germany could not have imagined, until it was too late, the danger of allowing a tyrant this kind of power. We must not be so naïve as to think it will not happen to us as well if we remain passive toward this power grab by the Marxist Obama administration!

Finally, for more than two centuries the nation has lived in peace at home because of the protections of our legitimate military and the many appropriate state and federal law enforcement agencies, supported by Constitutional courts. We stand today at a cross-road. Will we allow this present Administration to overthrow our United States Constitution and its legal processes to amend injustices, or, will we honor our obligations to defend the Constitution against a “domestic” enemy? Our Constitution lays out the proper methods of resolving our differences; and it does not include its overthrow by a rogue agency of a Marxist leadership at home. You, sir, are our constitutionally elected agent to defend our Constitution at home. We are counting upon you. We remain aware, however, of this present threat and will not expose ourselves as an easy prey to the authors of the destruction of our nation.

I know that this letter demands much of you. We elected you because we, the citizens of the State of Texas, believe that you are up to the task at hand and will, against all threats, honor your oath and office. We are also writing to your fellow members of the House and Senate to stand in integrity with the Constitution and against this present threat by the Obama administration and his DHS.

We refuse to surrender our Constitution or our nation!

Resolved,

Captain Terry M. Hestilow

Why Government Should Be The First Suspect In Any Terror Attack

In the aftermath of the Boston Marathon attack, authorities struggle to retain a coherent official narrative while photos circulate, showing numerous unidentified identically dressed men wearing black backpacks at the scene of the blast. These moments remind us that it's necessary to revisit the evidence of why government should be the very first suspect in the event of any terrorist atrocity.

Nero and the Great Fire of Rome

The Roman consul and historian Cassius Dio, his contemporary Suetonius and others say the Emperor Nero was responsible for the Great Fire of Rome in 64 AD.

Legend claims Nero had one-third of the city torched as an excuse to build Domus Aurea, a 300 acre palatial complex that included a towering statue of himself, the Colossus of Nero.

Prior to the fire, the Roman Senate had rejected the emperor's bid to level a third of the city to make way for a 'Neropolis,' an urban renewal project.

The Roman historian Tacitus wrote that when the population of Rome held Nero responsible for the fire, he shifted blame on the Christians for 'hating the human race' and starting the fire.

The Spanish American War: Remember the Maine

By the late 1800s, the United States was looking for an excuse to kick Spain out of Cuba. U.S. business was heavily invested in sugar, tobacco and iron on the Caribbean island.

The U.S.S. Maine was sent to Havana in January of 1898 to protect these business interests after a local insurrection broke out. Three weeks later, early on the morning of February 15, an explosion destroyed the forward third of the ship anchored in Havana's harbor, killing more than 270 American sailors.

President McKinley blamed Spain after the U.S. Naval Court of Inquiry declared that a naval mine caused the explosion.

American newspapers blamed the Spanish despite a lack of evidence. "You furnish the pictures and I'll furnish the war," newspaper tycoon William Randolph Hearst told Frederic Remington after the illustrator reported that the situation in Cuba did not warrant invasion.

A number of historians and researchers later argued that the ship was blown up by the United States to provide a false flag pretext to invade Cuba and expel Spain.

The United States occupied Cuba from 1898 until 1902, although an amendment to a joint resolution of Congress forbid the U.S. to annex the country.

Wilson's Pretext for War: The Sinking of the Lusitania

Nearly two thousand travelers, including one hundred Americans, were killed on May 7, 1915, when a German U-boat torpedoed the RMS Lusitania, a luxury Cunard Line British ocean liner.

Prior to the sinking, the German embassy in Washington issued a warning. Newspapers in the United States refused to print the warning or acknowledge the German claim that the ship carried munitions.

Wilson's government issued a flurry of diplomatic protests after the sinking and exploited the tragedy two years later as a pretext for America to enter the First World War.

Nearly a hundred years later, in 2008, divers discovered the Lusitania carried more than four million rounds of rifle ammunition.

"There were literally tons and tons of stuff stored in unrefrigerated cargo holds that were dubiously marked cheese, butter and oysters," Gregg Bemis, an American businessman who owns the rights to the wreck and is funding its exploration, told The Daily Mail.

Hitler's Fascist Dictatorship: The Reichstag Fire

In February of 1933, a month after convincing Germany's president that parliament must be eliminated, Hitler and the Nazis instigated the Reichstag fire.

Hitler then urged president Hindenburg to issue an emergency decree restricting personal liberty, including the right to free expression and a free press, limitations on the rights of association and assembly, warrantless searches of homes, property confiscation, and violations of postal, telegraphic and telephonic communications permissible beyond the legal limits otherwise prescribed.

The Nazis used the decree to crack down on their political opponents. They worked behind the scenes to force through the Enabling Act, which legally allowed Hitler to obtain plenary powers and establish a dictatorship.

Gestapo Reichsmarschall Hermann Goring would admit that, "The people can always be brought to the bidding of the leaders. That is easy. All you have to do is tell them they are being attacked and denounce the pacifists for lack of patriotism and exposing the country to danger. It works the same way in any country."

Prelude to World War: The Gleiwitz Incident

Six years after the Reichstag Fire, the Nazis staged the Gleiwitz incident. Nazi commandos raided a German radio station in Gleiwitz, Upper Silesia, Germany. The raid was part of Operation Himmler, a series of operations undertaken by the SS as Hitler set the stage for the invasion of Poland and the start of the Second World War.

SS operatives dressed in Polish uniforms attacked the radio station, broadcast an anti-German message in Polish, and left behind the body of a German Silesian known for sympathizing with the Poles. The corpse was then offered to the press as evidence that the Poles had attacked the radio station.

FALSE FLAG TERRORISM

attacks manufactured or provoked by governments and then blamed on other groups – is a tactic that stretches back almost 2,000 years.

Israeli False Flag Terror: The Lavon Affair

In 1954, the Israelis activated a terrorist cell in response to the United States making friends with the Egyptian government and its pan-Arab leader, Gamal Abdel Nasser. The Israelis were worried Nasser would nationalize the Suez Canal and continue Egypt's blockade of Israeli shipping through the canal.

Israeli Prime Minister David Ben Gurion decided a false flag terrorist attack on American interests in Egypt would sour the new relationship. He recruited and dispatched a terror cell that pretended to be Egyptian terrorists.

The plan, however, contained a fatal flaw.

Israel's top secret cell, Unit 131, was infiltrated by Egyptian intelligence. After a member of the cell was arrested and interrogated, he revealed the plot and this led to more arrests. Israeli agents were subjected to a public trial revealing details of the plan to firebomb the U.S. Information Agency's libraries, a British-owned Metro-Goldwyn Mayer theatre, a railway terminal, the central post office, and other targets.

In order to deflect blame, the Israeli government tried to frame its own Defense Minister, Pinhas Lavon, but the true nature of the plot was eventually made public.

Operation Northwoods: Targeting American Citizens

In the covert war against the communist regime in Cuba under the CIA's Operation Mongoose, the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff unanimously proposed state-sponsored acts of terrorism inside the United States.

The plan included shooting down hijacked American airplanes, the sinking of U.S. ships, and the shooting of Americans on the streets of Washington, D.C. The outrageous plan even included a staged NASA disaster that would claim the life of astronaut John Glenn.

Reeling under the embarrassing failure of the CIA's botched Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, President Kennedy rejected the plan in March of 1962. A few months later, Kennedy denied the plan's author, General Lyman Lemnitzer, a second term as the nation's highest ranking military officer.

In November 1963, Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, Texas.

Gulf of Tonkin: Phantom Attack on the U.S. Military

On Aug. 4, 1964, President Lyndon Johnson went on national television and told the nation that North Vietnam had attacked U.S. ships.

"Repeated acts of violence against the armed forces of the United States must be met not only with alert defense, but with a positive reply. That reply is being given as I speak tonight," Johnson declared.

Congress soon passed the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, which provided Johnson with pre-approved authority to conduct military operations against North Vietnam. By 1969, more than 500,000 troops were fighting in Southeast Asia.

Johnson and his Secretary of Defense, Robert McNamara, had bamboozled Congress and the American people. In fact, North Vietnam had not attacked the USS Maddox, as the Pentagon claimed, and the "unequivocal proof" of an "unprovoked" second attack against the U.S. warship was a ruse.

Following the Second World War, the CIA and Britain's MI6 collaborated through NATO on Operation Gladio, an effort to create a "stay behind army" to fight communism in the event of a Soviet invasion of Western Europe.

Gladio quickly transcended its original mission and became a covert terror network consisting of right wing militias, organized crime elements, agent provocateurs and secret military units. The so-called stay behind armies were active in France, Belgium, Denmark, The Netherlands, Norway, Germany, and Switzerland.

Gladio's "Strategy of Tension" was designed to portray leftist political groups in Europe as terrorists and frighten the populace into voting for authoritarian governments. In order to carry out this goal, Gladio operatives conducted a number of deadly terrorists attacks that were blamed on leftists and Marxists.

In August 1980, Gladio operatives bombed a train station in Bologna, killing 85 people. Initially blamed on the Red Brigades, it was later discovered that fascist elements within the Italian secret police and Licio Gelli, the head of the P2 Masonic Lodge, were responsible for the terror attack. Other fascist groups, including Avanguardia Nazionale and Ordine Nuovo, were mobilized and engaged in terror.

Operation Gladio ultimately claimed the lives of hundreds of people across Europe.

According to Vincenzo Vinciguerra, a Gladio terrorist serving a life-sentence for murdering policemen, the reason for Gladio was simple. It was designed to force these people, the Italian public, to turn to the state to ask for greater security. This is the political logic that lies behind all the massacres and the bombings which remain unpunished, because the state cannot convict itself or declare itself responsible for what happened.

Terror in the modern age

In the United States, the modern age of terrorism is defined by the FBI's policy of fomenting and provocateuring patsy terrorists to carry out attacks via entrapment.

As the New York Times reported last year, the vast majority of domestic terror plots in recent years were "facilitated by the F.B.I."

Before the attack, the FBI planted informant Emad A. Salem within a radical Arab group in New York led by Ramzi Yousef. Salem was ordered to encourage the group to carry out a bombing targeting the World Trade Center's twin towers. Under the illusion that the project was a sting operation, Salem asked the FBI for harmless dummy explosives which he would use to assemble the bomb and then pass on to the group.

At this point the FBI cut Salem out of the loop and provided the group with real explosives, leading to the attack on Feb. 26 that killed six and injured more than a thousand people. The FBI's failure to prevent the bombing was reported on by the New York Times in October 1993, as well as CBS News.

Underwear Bomber

Detroit Lawyer Kurt Haskell witnessed a well-dressed man help the "underwear bomber" Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab clear security before the attempted attack on an airliner on Christmas Day 2009 despite the fact that the bomber had no passport, in addition to the fact that his own father had warned U.S. intelligence officials of the threat posed by Abdulmutallab a month before the attempted attack.

It later emerged that the State Department was ordered not to revoke Abdulmutallab's visa by "federal counterterrorism officials" even though the accused bomber had known terrorist ties.

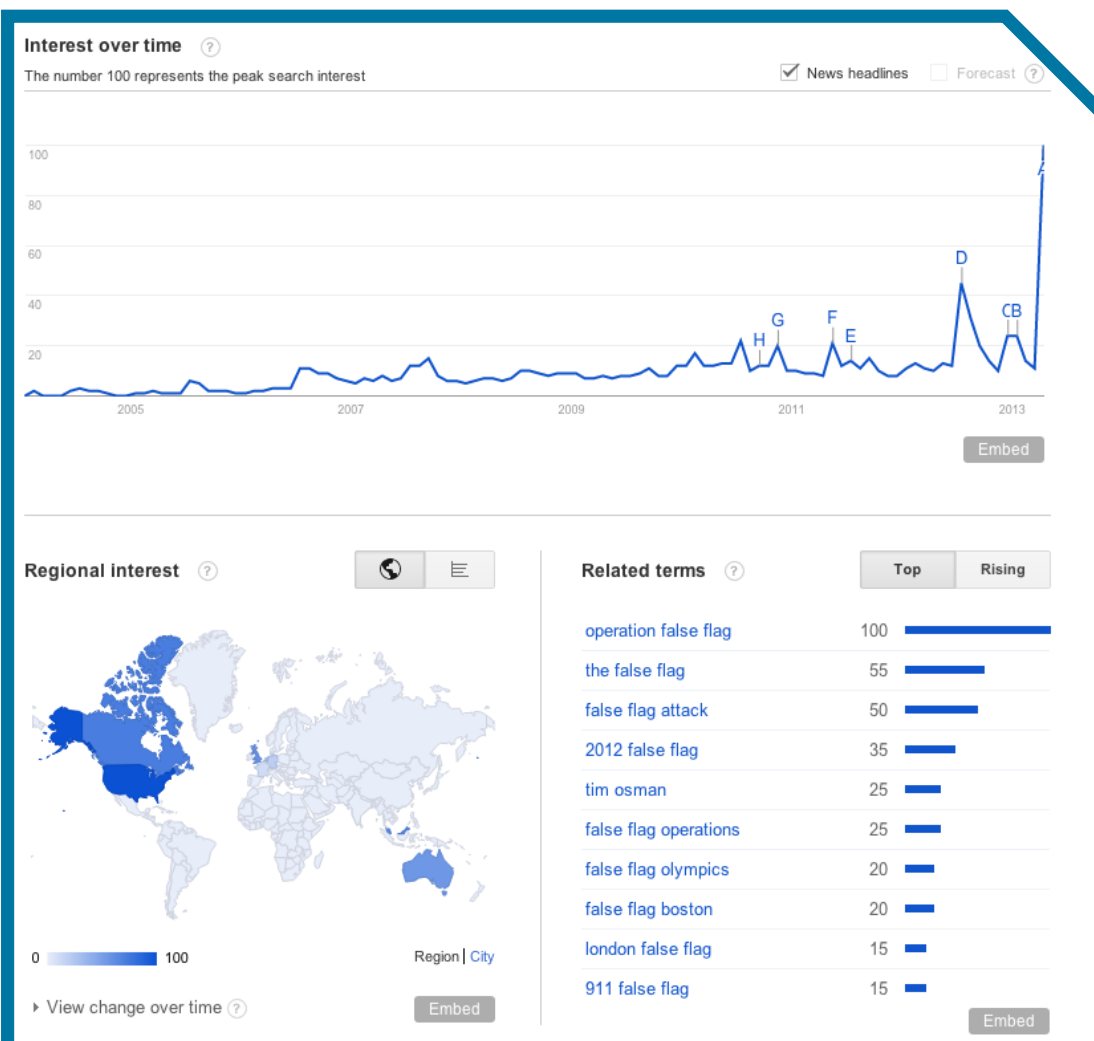

Haskell maintains that Abdulmutallab was carrying a fake bomb and was the unwitting dupe in another case of government entrapment.

This is by no means an exhaustive length of cases involving false flag attacks steered or provocateured by governments—such an endeavor would fill an encyclopedia-sized book—but it is a reminder that those who forget history are doomed to repeat it, and only the myopically naive would fail to shine the spotlight on the state in the immediate aftermath of any terrorist attack.

“What’s a ‘False Flag’?”

Google Trends Shows Search Term Spike

Google Trends is a tool developed to allow users to see what others have been searching for using the Google search engine.

Data displayed by Google’s web search trend analytic tool, Google Trends, shows more and more people are actively conducting their own independent research as an alternative to unquestionably digesting everything reported by the mainstream dinosaur media.

According to Google, “Google Trends analyzes a portion of worldwide Google web searches from all Google domains to compute how many searches have been done for the terms you’ve entered, relative to the total number of searches done on Google over time.”

The media’s frenzied attempts to demonize Infowars.com reporter Dan Bidondi and other alternative media outlets for quickly labeling the Boston Marathon bombings a “false flag” attack have certainly backfired as people are curious over the term now more than ever in the past nine years.

Infowars reporter Dan Bidondi was on location at there were announcements telling people there was a “training exercise” in progress prior to the explosions taking place.

the Boston Marathon explosion press conferences minutes after the event and managed to get Boston Police Commissioner Edward Davis to state they had “no specific intelligence” regarding a drill taking place prior to the event.

Contrast the commissioner’s statements with University of Mobile cross country track coach Alastair Stevenson’s testimony that there were announcements telling people there was a “training exercise” in progress prior to the explosions taking place.

Anthony Gucciardi of StoryLeak.com was able to get an exclusive interview with coach Stevenson, who says, “There was absolutely a drill going on outside the athlete’s village before the race.”

“Turban Cowboy” 15th Episode of the 11th season of Family Guy

FAMILY GUY EPISODE PREDICTED BOSTON MARATHON ATTACK

An episode of the popular show Family Guy which was first aired less than a month ago eerily predicted aspects of the Boston Marathon attack, depicting the main character detonating two bombs in addition to winning the marathon by killing the rest of the participants.

The episode, named Turban Cowboy, centers around Peter becoming embroiled with terrorists who plan on blowing up bridges in Boston. The show aired on March 17, just under a month ago on the Fox network and has been repeated in recent days.

The image of Peter killing the Boston Marathon runners even shows blood and missing limbs, a chilling reminder of the very real scenes of carnage we saw yesterday.

It is important to note that the video shows two clips from different points of the show edited together, but they are from the same episode.

Critics responded to the episode by remarking that it “feels like an episode made in 2002 and left on the shelf for a decade.”

The plot was so similar to the tragic events in Boston yesterday that scenes have been deleted for rebroadcasts.

“the plot was so similar to the tragic events in boston that scenes have been deleted for rebroadcasts”

YouTube has now censored a commentary video which merely pointed out that a recently broadcast episode of Family Guy contained scenes very similar to those that unfolded during the Boston Marathon attack. YouTube deleted the video claiming it contained, “spam,” “scams” or “commercially deceptive content,” when it contained none of these things. YouTube has also placed a strike against the host channel and threatened to delete it.

In addition, it is now being claimed that the whole issue is an “abhorrent hoax” merely because the two scenes from the same episode were spliced together. The fact that the episode depicted people being killed at the Boston Marathon, in addition to a separate clip which depicted two explosions, is not a hoax.

Family Guy creator Seth MacFarlane created a cartoon which made fun of terrorist bombings and depicted mutilated Boston Marathon runners, yet he is labeling people who merely talk about the episode as “abhorrent”.

Tivo and others are now removing the episode from their systems, which is strange given that the episode is supposedly a “hoax” and doesn’t exist, according to the media.

This underscores the fact that if they will censor a cartoon in the aftermath of a terrorist attack, they will censor anything – including your right to merely talk about it.

The Monsanto Protection Act passed in the senate and effectively gives the GMO-shoving corporation power that the U.S. Government cannot even top

Senate Passes Monsanto Protection Act Granting Monsanto Power Over US Government

In the typical slippery nature of Monsanto's legislation-based actions, the biotech giant is now virtually guaranteed the ability to recklessly plant experimental GM crops without having to worry about the United States government and its subsequent courts. The Monsanto Protection Act buried deep within the budget resolution has passed the Senate, and now nothing short of a presidential veto will put an end to the ruling.

In case you're not familiar, the Monsanto Protection Act is the name given to what's known as a legislative rider that was inserted into the Senate Continuing Resolution spending bill. Using the deceptive title of Farmer Assurance Provision, Sec. 735 of this bill actually grants Monsanto the immunity from federal courts pending the review of any GM crop that is thought to be dangerous. Under the section, courts would be helpless to stop Monsanto from continuing to plant GM crops that are thought even by the U.S. government to be a danger to health or the environment.

Using the deceptive title of Farmer Assurance Provision, Sec. 735 of this bill actually grants Monsanto the immunity from federal courts

Senate Ignored the Public's Outcry Against the Act

It is a lobbyist-created recurring nuisance that has been squashed in previous legislation thanks to outcry from not only grassroots but major organizations. Last time we saw The Center for Food Safety, the National Family Farm Coalition, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Sierra Club, and the Union of Concerned Scientists all come out against the Monsanto Protection Act from the 2012 Farm Bill.

The Senate acted so quickly on this, almost entirely ignoring the issue that it has passed despite thousands of petitioners. A petition by Food Democracy Now detailed the effects of the bill:

"If approved, the Monsanto Protection Act would force the USDA to allow continued planting of any GMO crop under court review, essentially giving backdoor approval for any new genetically engineered crops that could be potentially harmful to human health or the environment."

That said, a new petition exists telling Obama to veto the bill. The reality is that the bill including the Monsanto Protection Act is actually seen as positive by most politicians. This is where Monsanto lobbyists were so deceptive and slippery as to throw in their rider (the actual Monsanto Protection Act into the larger bill under review). Doing so makes it very unappealing to veto the bill. We must remember that Obama actually promised to immediately label GMOs back in 2007 when running for President.

Ushering In a New Era of Activism

The simple fact is that this problem will likely not be easily squashed, and instead Monsanto will get what they wanted. That said, this ushers in an entirely new era of activism. Monsanto has decided to push the envelope in a way that is unprecedented, fighting the U.S. federal courts. I expected to see almost immediate legal action taken that will certainly hit the headlines, leading to even more people to become aware of what's really going on with this company and therefore their dinner.

Sometimes in order to truly have an intellectual revolution on a subject, the people need to see exactly what they are facing. With the truly blatant and downright arrogant Monsanto Protection Act, it's now clearer than ever.

The LA Times and many other globalists propaganda organs were quick to demonize anyone that dared investigate the official story put out by the feds concerning the Boston Marathon Bombing tragedy. However, even the most politically unaware citizens were shocked when, during a news conference, the FBI instructed the American people that they should only look at the information and photos put out by the bureau.

One tactic used by establishment propagandists is the "straw man," and we see this tactic at work, when the LA Times wrote in its editorial cartoon and article, shown here, that I was making claims that I had never actually made. One example is their gross misrepresentation of what I said regarding the navy seals. They claimed that I reported the navy seals were the ones who carried out the bombing, when in truth I simply pointed out that undercover personnel taking part in a drill resembled military contractors and navy seals. Further, the absurd editorial cartoon depicted that I believe flying monkeys were also sent by Obama as part of the attack.

One should also take note that the Nazi propagandists were obsessed with depicting their enemies as rats, so the LA Times is in fitting company. The sad truth is that our government and other governments have been caught over and over again staging and provocateuring terror attacks.

Growin' Against The Flow

In these times of uncertainty, you really need to take an introspective look and decide, are you ready? Well are you? It's not a simple answer or even a simple question. With the looming potential for continued terroristic attacks, infrastructure collapse, and martial law, poisoned and/or rationed food supplies, droughts, war and natural disasters how do you decide if you're ready? While teaching various community workshops and classes, it became evident that the general population was not even prepared for a minor emergency.

In any emergency you will "need to bring something to the table," whether in a sole survivor or group setting. Hard goods and/or something to barter with will not be enough! You must also possess the knowledge, tools and experience to confront a multitude of challenges that will arise.

Knowledge, the information and education regarding practical/useful skills and techniques.

Tools, the items and equipment used to accomplish specific tasks. These can be manufactured or may need to be improvised, depending on the situation.

Experience, the repeated application of your knowledge and tools to accomplish your goals. Owning a saw does not make a carpenter, using it skillfully on a repeated basis does.

Do you have the knowledge, the tools and the experience to make it? If not, NOW is the time to start preparing with us! You can become sustainable. It all starts out with the very basic desire to survive. A good foundation is stated in Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs; Food, Water, Shelter and Warmth. This is the foundation of survival.

In preparation for becoming a sustainable/survivable grower, there are a few tools that you will need. This list contains the bare minimum equipment you will need to survive, but should not be construed as all encompassing. Your imagination and creativity are your only limits. Here is the list and a brief description of how they may be used;

Spade- for digging or for burying stores of supplies or confidential information.

Hard rake- for leveling out grow or make-shift construction areas.

Folding pruning saw- for pruning as well as gathering wood for fuel

5 gallon buckets and a watering can- for collection/distribution of irrigation and drinking water and as general carriers.

4 or 5 tine fork (Potato spade) - for incorporating amendments into soil and for working your compost pile.

Leather work gloves and eye protection- you can't work toward your survival if you are injured. At that point, you are now a liability instead of an asset.

Hand operated garden shears or pruner- for tending to your crop.

Plastic tarp, 2 each- at least 5' x 7', reflective on one side. May be used for coverage, shelter or re-directing light for grows in reduced light areas.

Zipper type bags, assorted sizes- for storage of harvested crops, seeds and amendments/pest control products.

Containers, assorted sizes, opaque, airtight- for long term storage of provisions and seed. This will protect from moisture, light and oxygen, the three main enemies of seed and provisions in storage.

Zip ties, all purpose wire and twine, assorted lengths and sizes- for securing crops to stakes, etc...

Claw hammer with assorted nails- for driving stakes and assisting in digging or constructing garden fixtures.

Survival knife with sharpening stone- for general use. Make sure you have a wet stone. It's no good if it's dull.

Most of these items can actually be stored in the buckets on this list. This way all of your grow items stay together, in the case that you may have to relocate.

In your garden, now is the time to increase beneficial bacterial and microbial populations in the soil. The simplest way to do this is with a generous application of compost combined with molasses. Apply the molasses at the rate of 2 oz. per gallon of water. The molasses provides a source of complex carbohydrates for energy and the compost supplies the bio mass of food for both the beneficial organisms and the plants.

In upcoming issues we will explore these topics and more. The subjects will cover a range of skills, techniques and information, in an easy to follow, practical format. I will share not only my knowledge and experience but many specialists in their fields as well, and give you the guidance to create "your own tool kit" to grow against the flow.

In our next issue; 1. Food – "Home Grown American Sustainability" from the ground up.

Gordon R. Wybo has over 25 years experience in emergency services, disaster response and planning and an additional 40+ years growing food and construction. Over that time he has developed and shared a practical set of skills and abilities that allow him and others to deal with a vast array of situations in an emergency. This eventually led him to create Sustainacyle's Sustainable Living Center at Kyle, A community space for learning, cultivating and demonstrating self-reliance, urban farming, D-I-Y and environmentally-responsible skills for all ages.

Taking Aim On The Ammo Shortage

From big-box retailers to small mom-and-pop shops, ammo retailers across the country are being forced to ration supplies. From coast to coast local law enforcement agencies are being told they may have to wait up to a year for their next shipment of ammo. Yet the feds have stockpiled enough ammunition to arm a 24-year Iraq war. Why? What are they gearing-up for?

We wanted to see the ammo rationing by retailers firsthand, so we sent reporter Jakari Jackson undercover to the local shops to see if they would sell him ammo or if they would refuse or dissuade him because of the rationing.

Local ammo retailers can't keep up with demand: Paul Carter and his wife Debbie own East Texas Ammo in Mineola, Texas. A little over a year ago they installed semi-automatic commercial loaders and went through the licensing process that would allow them to manufacture their own ammo for resale. Carter says, at the time, it was just an extra added service for their local customers.

Now, though, Carter says he has requests coming in from Texas, Oklahoma, Alabama and even as far away as Maine, and he, his wife, and an employee are working over-time trying to produce enough ammo to meet the demand. Requests are even coming in from California law enforcement agencies who don't have enough ammo on hand to qualify their new officers.

Sales of their in-store made ammo are skyrocketing because he's not getting ammo shipments from his regular suppliers. For a while, Carter was able to keep up with demand, but now his component suppliers are having trouble delivering the powder, primers and casing he needs to continue production.

Like many ammo shops across the nation, East Texas Ammo is a small, local shop and Carter says he believes ammo manufacturers and component suppliers are taking care of their big customers first because it only makes good sense financially.

He also believes that one of those big customers is the Department of Homeland Security, and suppliers are forced to meet those government contracts first or face a stiff penalty.

Like many Americans, Carter wonders why the DHS needs so much ammo. "Where is it? Why is DHS buying it? Why do they need that much? They've ordered enough ammo for five Afghan wars!"

Carter says his East Texas Ammo customers are taking it all in stride – for now. When asked what his customers are saying about the various gun control proposals on the table, Carter said,

"My customers are all saying, 'This would not save the children. We need to be looking at the mental health issue more than anything.'"

Local Law-Enforcement Agencies Can't Get Ammo

Local law-enforcement agencies across the country are facing critical ammo shortages as the increased demand is limiting access to their own supply that they usually provide to their officers. Agencies in Texas, Nevada, California, Maine, Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Arizona, Georgia and dozens of other states are all facing supply problems.

Sheriff Maxey Cerliano in Gregg County, Texas, warned his deputies in March that the department would not be able to supply the ammunition they'd need for their upcoming firearms qualifications. Additionally Sheriff Anthony DeMeo of Nye County, Nev., was told his department's regular order of 50,000 rounds would take up to a year to arrive.

Many agencies are limiting the number of rounds they issue to officers during the shortage, or limiting the number of times they can visit the firing range for practice, but at what cost? What good is a police officer who hasn't been able to practice shooting? More important – how effective is a police officer who has no bullets? At least Barney Fife had one in his pocket at all times.

Big-Box Retailers Rationing Ammo

It's not just the small, local suppliers who are having trouble getting ammo shipments. Big-box retailers like Walmart, Bass Pro Shops and Gander Mountain are also receiving partial orders from their suppliers. Just a few months ago they'd receive cases of ammo at a time and now they receive maybe six or eight boxes, forcing many locations to resort to rationing, limiting sales to one or two boxes per customer.

Sales clerks have been instructed to dissuade ammo buyers even when they have stock

Reporter Jakari Jackson goes to check out and test the rationing

“We tried hard not to do that for a long time,” said Gander Mountain spokesman Jess Myers. “But our competitors were increasingly limiting customers to a certain number of boxes, and ultimately we had to follow suit. It became a matter of fairness to our customers.”

For many it's a psychological thing.

If there are only two boxes on the shelf you better snap 'em up now, whether you need 'em or not. Who knows when the next shipment will come in? Gun owners who've never purchased more than 500 rounds at a time are suddenly buying 5,000 or 10,000 just because they're the last few boxes on the shelf.

What's Causing The Ammo Shortage? Panic-Buying!

Why are Americans suddenly buying more guns? Part of it has to do with personal safety. After Aurora, Colo., Oak Creek Wis., and Newtown, Conn., Americans are buying more guns to protect themselves, their kids and their property. Many people who never would have purchased a gun are doing so now simply because everyone around them has a gun.

But many more Americans are buying guns because they see the hand-writing on the wall. The concern over firearms availability and the potential for strict gun control regulations are creating a “panic-buying” atmosphere. Just like ammo, instead of buying one or two guns, people are buying as many guns and firearms as they can lay their hands on – just in case, and for every gun they buy, they need to buy more ammo.

The FBI conducted approximately 76.8 million background checks for firearm purchases from 2001 to 2009. From 2010 to present they've conducted more than 70 million. Last year alone they conducted approximately 19.6 million background checks. More than 2 million were conducted in November 2012, and another 2.78 million were conducted in December following the Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting in Newtown, Conn.

Each month since December 2012 background checks have exceeded 2 million, and through the end of March the FBI conducted more than 7 million. At this pace the total number of background checks could well exceed 28 million by the end of the year—and each one of those guns needs ammo.

.22 LONG RIFLE

Right now, all ammo is in high-demand but what has consumers most frustrated is the shortage of .22 long rifle bullets.

The .22 LR is the most popular ammo on the market. Most gun-owners own a .22, especially women and first-time owners, and the .22 is cheap ammo to use when you're plinking around at the gun range, learning how to shoot. It's cheap, light, accurate and can shoot through 1/2-inch of wood or take down game. Until recently, you could walk into any store and buy a 500-brick for peanuts, right along with your favorite candy bar and soda.

But these days you're going to have to stand in line, and maybe even put your name on a waiting list. Many gun-owners are stock-piling .22s because they're so inexpensive. They also believe there's some barter-value in having a safe full of .22s.

What's Causing The Panic? Obama!

Obama's no dummy. He knows if he just signs an order banning guns or limiting their availability he's going to have a national riot on his hands. If he can't just issue an out-and-out ban, the next best thing he can do is make those guns and ammo difficult to access. The only way to do that is to incite panic.

Right now his plan is working. He's threatening to ban guns – or at least make them extremely difficult to purchase – so millions of people are rushing out to buy a firearm before the ban goes into effect. But he's only biding his time. Three things will happen:

Number One: Guns and ammunition will be in short supply—and they already are. Millions of Americans may have registered for and purchased multiple guns because of the panic.

Number Two: Obama and his supporters will ban any kind of firearm they want without any argument from the people because, in theory, everybody who wants to buy a gun has had plenty of time to do so. And remember, they've legally registered to make that purchase.

Number Three: Once he starts banning guns there will be no stopping him. Obama will have the names and addresses of every gun-owner in the country and Big Sis will be only too happy to come knocking at your door, demanding you turn over your firearm.

FBI BACKGROUND CHECKS

The FBI conducted approximately 76.8 million background checks for firearm purchases from 2001 to 2009. From 2010 to present they've conducted more than 70 million. Last year alone they conducted approximately 19.6 million background checks. More than 2 million were conducted in November 2012, and another 2.78 million were conducted in December following the Sandy Hook Elementary School shooting in Newtown, Conn. Each month since December 2012 background checks have exceeded 2 million, and through the end of March the FBI conducted more than 7 million. At this pace the total number of background checks could well exceed 28 million by the end of the year—and each one of those guns needs ammo.

The Department of Homeland Security is a Key Player, too

After weeks of silence and delay-tactics, the DHS finally answered a letter sent by New Jersey Congressman Leonard Lance (R) asking for an explanation for why the DHS was purchasing 1.6 billion hollow-point bullets.

DHS chief Janet Napolitano explained that ordering the ammo in bulk saves money and despite concerns that the government was stockpiling ammo, the 1.6 billion hollow-point bullets were going to be used for training purposes only.

But as Infowars.com has reported before, that explanation doesn't wash with people like Richard Mason, a former Marine. Hollow-point bullets are not used for training purposes because they're much more expensive than standard firing range ammo, in fact they cost twice as much as standard full-metal jackets.

"We never trained with hollow points, we didn't even see hollow points my entire four and a half years in the Marine Corps," Mason said.

Paul Carter is right. Once a manufacturer wins a government contract he's forced to deliver or face severe penalties. With more than 2 billion rounds on order, the DHS contract means that ammo manufacturers have very little left to ship out to the rest of the country after they're done supplying Big Sis each month.

Even if the DHS has no intention of taking or using the ammo they've ordered, they've created a simple case of supply and demand that equals scarcity and panic. Combined with the gun-buying panic that Obama's created and one can see why there's a severe ammo shortage in America.

"We never trained with hollow points, we didn't even see hollow points my entire four and a half years in the Marine Corps,"

What's Next?

The government is preparing for the inevitable collapse of our financial system. An economic collapse will lead to looting, rioting, violence and killing in the streets and the eventual collapse of society. They're not gearing up to attack us and they're not planning for an insurgency. They're planning for the complete unraveling of America, and they want to make sure they come out on top.

It's not the number of guns and bullets in the hands of the average American we need to be concerned about. It's the number of feds with guns and bullets we need to worry about.

Estimates put the number of federal law enforcement officers with arrest and firearms authority at somewhere between 135,000 and 145,000. Compare that to an estimated 765,000 state and local law enforcement officers nationwide – officers with no new guns and no ammo—and that means that about one in seven law enforcement officers in the country is a fed, someone with higher authority who's well armed and has plenty of ammo.

The ammo you see on the shelves now will continue to dwindle as more and more buyers operate in panic-mode. Even if the DHS never actually accepts a shipment of ammo right now, they'll continue to tie up supplies for the future and they'll continue to add to the atmosphere of panic by contracting these massive orders. By agreeing to any gun control legislation, we're playing right into their hands.

62% say if they were a chief or sheriff they would refuse to enforce new federal laws

In a national survey of members of one of the largest groups for law enforcement professionals, an overwhelming majority of active duty and retired officers said that the Obama administration's gun control proposals will either have no effect or will make things significantly worse.

In the survey conducted by PoliceOne.com, a stunning 85 percent of law enforcement professionals said that in their opinion, a federal ban on assault weapons would have no effect on crime, and would likely have a negative effect on their safety.

When asked whether a federal ban on ammunition magazines holding more than 10 rounds would reduce violent crime, 96 percent of law enforcement professionals said no.

The survey also revealed that nearly three times as many former and active police believe that a federal ban would exacerbate violent crime rather than help to reduce it.

In addition, twice as many believe that they will be less safe than more safe because of the gun control provisions.

When asked what they thought was the best course of action to prevent incidents such as the recent Sandy Hook school and Aurora Theater shootings, almost one third of law enforcement professionals said "more permissive concealed carry policies for civilians." In addition, 86 percent said that they felt a legally armed citizen could have reduced casualties at both incidents.

Furthermore, a huge 91 percent said that they support concealed carry by honest/screened citizens, and a massive 80 percent of respondents also said they supported arming school teachers and officials with guns.

“Contrary to what the mainstream media and certain politicians would have us believe, police overwhelmingly favor an armed citizenry, would like to see more guns in the hands of responsible people, and are skeptical of any greater restrictions placed on gun purchase, ownership, or accessibility,” said Doug Wylie, editor of PoliceOne.com.

As we have reported, many law enforcement officials have stated over recent weeks that they would refuse to enforce federal gun control laws. The Police One survey addresses this, with 71 percent judging the refusals to be favorable or very favorable. Only 7 percent of the responding officers said that they found the refusal statements from chiefs and sheriffs to be “very unfavorable.”

In addition, a majority of 62 percent said that if they were a chief or sheriff they would refuse to enforce the new laws. Only 18 percent said they would happily enforce new gun control laws.

“This survey captures the perspective of an audience that has an intimate professional connection to gun policies in our country, yet is rarely heard from as a group in discussions on the issue,” said Alex Ford, CEO of the Praetorian Group,

PoliceOne’s parent company.

“Our standing as the leading online community in the law enforcement market enabled us to gather what we feel is the most meaningful sampling of police attitudes about gun control ever compiled. There is clearly a wide range of opinions regarding this issue nationwide and we believe it’s important for our audience’s voice to be heard.” Ford added.

The survey, which received over 15,000 responses, proves that police, first responders and those who deal with gun related crime every day are firmly against further government gun control, believing it would be detrimental to public safety, in addition to their own well being.

Despite these facts, the vice president would have the nation believe that the only people opposed to the administration’s gun control policies are tin foil hat-wearing nut jobs.

The poll shows, without a doubt, that law enforcement professionals strongly believe that an armed citizenry is much more effective in reducing crime than any federal government restrictions to the Second Amendment.

...police overwhelmingly favor an armed citizenry, would like to see more guns in the hands of responsible people, and are skeptical of any greater restrictions...

Seen across street after blasts talking with FBI bomb squad. Who were they? What were they and the FBI doing?

What appear to be private contractors, wearing unmarked, matching uniforms and operating an unmarked SUV affixed with communication equipment near the finish line of the Boston Marathon shortly after the bomb blasts – can be seen beforehand, standing and waiting just meters away from where the first bomb was detonated.

The contractor-types had moved away from the bomb’s location before it detonated, and could be seen just across the street using communication equipment and waiting for similar dressed and equipped individuals to show up after the blasts.

Image: After the explosion, two of the contractors seen by the wall next to the bomb, appear across the street, both using communication equipment. This photo too has been distributed and enlarged many times across the Internet.

Image: The men, numbering between 6-8 then begin tearing up the skirting around temporary bleachers erected for the event, opposite the explosion, before tapping it off. Then, what appears to be an FBI bomb squad truck pulls up directly behind the contractor-types' SUV, with a woman clearly wearing the letters F.B.I. on her tactical vest emerging and speaking with the contractor-types. Together they disappear from the scene, leaving their vehicles behind.

Image: An unmarked SUV with a considerable amount of communication gear on the roof appears, surrounded by identically dressed men. The vehicle parks near the bleachers.

Image: The FBI truck and contractor SUV sit seemingly abandoned – neither the FBI agent, nor the contractors can be seen. What they did, or where they went remains so far, unknown.

Image: Event staff and contractors both above and below the bleachers begin tearing up the skirting and appear to be looking for something or retrieving something while casualties are still being treated and evacuated across the street.

It should be noted, that with the exception of the contractor-types, all other responders at the scene, including the FBI agent, can be clearly identified, from police to the fire department, to medics and even individuals wearing vests with "B.A.A. Physician" written on them. It should also be noted that no other uniformed individuals can be seen standing near the bomb site aside from the contractor-types.

These men were unidentified, professional contractors apparently augmenting public servants at the Boston Marathon, present before and after the bomb blasts in the direct vicinity of the incident. After the blasts, whether it was their intended function or not, they appeared to be searching for something under the bleachers before being joined by what appears to be the FBI bomb squad. The FBI and the city of Boston has so far categorically failed to provide any information on these highly suspicious individuals.

Questions That Must be Answered

Several questions must be answered by the FBI, leading the investigation on behalf of we, the American people. The first question is who these men were, with large, black bags in the direct vicinity of where a bomb would detonate, moving away before the blast, and appearing directly across the road afterward. Who hired them and what was their function? Why were they moving amongst the crowd in a semi-covert fashion when all other public servants present were wearing proper uniforms and clearly identified? Did police, firefighters, event organizers, and medics know these men were present and what they were doing?

Why did it appear that the FBI was fully aware of their presence, and in fact working with them, specifically with what looks like a bomb squad unit? Were these contractors specialists in explosives, and if so, what is the significance that at least two of them were spotted just meters from where the blast occurred?

Why These Questions Demand Answers

The checkered, frightening history (see: FBI's History of Handling "Terror Suspects" Live Explosives) of the FBI's involvement in fomenting false terror attacks, and even presiding over attacks that succeeded in maiming and killing innocent people, should call into question their presence or involvement at any public event, especially when seen associating with unidentified, semi-clandestine organizations that appear to be private contractors.

Private contractors as well, do not answer or work for the public, but rather the highest bidder. Private contractors, most notably Blackwater and its various incarnations have operated both domestically and abroad, committing obscene crimes and atrocities with seemingly absolute impunity. The term "defense contractor" is in fact a euphemism for mercenary, and has no place in a civilized, democratic world, no matter what their alleged mission statement may claim.

That both of these nefarious entities were present and cooperating in the direct vicinity of the Boston bombings, with at least two contractors standing just meters away from where the bomb actually went off, raises a number of possibilities and concerns. A drill may have been being conducted, though the FBI and city officials have denied this. Or, a threat may have been communicated to event organizers ahead of time, which prompted the inclusion of "auxiliary" security, though again, both the FBI and the city of Boston deny receiving any information prior to the bombings. Whichever contracting firm this may have been, may just have wanted to swindle Boston's taxpayers for an easy payday, and coincidentally found itself in the middle of extraordinary circumstances.

However, alarming suspicion is raised when the FBI makes no mention of an organization it was clearly coordinating with, particularly in terms of bombs and explosives before and after the incident, considering the nature of the attack. When an already dubious organization attempts to obfuscate the facts of any given event, it is the right and responsibility of legitimate law enforcement, public representatives and the citizenry itself to demand and get answers. If we are not persistent, with the FBI's bizarre behavior over the past few days, including inexplicably cancelled and suspiciously rushed press conferences, and now what appears to be a Hollywood ending for the case, we may never get those answers.

Note: Most images seen on pages 40 and 41 were taken from Flickr user HahaTango, the entire collection of 150 images from the Boston Marathon can be found here. <http://www.flickr.com/photos/hahatango/sets/72157633252445135/>

written by:
MICHAEL SNYDER

It is alarming that the mainstream media seems to be afraid to ask any of the hard questions that they should be asking. They just seem to swallow whatever the authorities tell them hook, line and sinker without following up on any of the things in this case that simply do not seem to make sense.

So what kinds of questions should they be asking? The following are 17 unanswered questions about the Boston Marathon bombing that the media appears to be afraid to ask...

#1 Why were runners being told that a bomb squad drill was taking place during the Boston Marathon? The following is from an article by Natural News...

Alastair Stevenson is a veteran marathon runner who has competed in dozens of marathons around the world, including the London Marathon. He's very familiar with the security typically found at marathons, and he immediately noticed something odd about the Boston marathon security.

"They kept making announcements on the loud speaker that it was just a drill and there was nothing to worry about. It seemed like there was some sort of threat, but they kept telling us it was just a drill," he was quoted as saying by Local15TV.com.

In the interview, you'll hear Stevenson say:

"At the start [of] the event, at the Athlete's Village, there were people on the roof looking down onto the Village at the start. There were dogs with their handlers going around sniffing for explosives, and we were told on a loud announcement that we shouldn't be concerned and that it was just a drill. And maybe it was just a drill, but I've never seen anything like that — not at any marathon that I've ever been to. You know, that just concerned me that that's the only race that I've seen in my life where they had dogs sniffing for explosions, and that's the only place where there had been explosions."

#2 Why did authorities deny that a bomb squad drill was being held?

#3 According to The Mirror, the FBI is reportedly "hunting" a 12-strong terrorist "sleeper cell" that Tamerlan and Dzhokhar Tsarnaev were allegedly a part of...

A source close to the investigation said: "We have no doubt the brothers were not acting alone. The devices used to detonate the two bombs were highly sophisticated and not the kind of thing people learn from Google.

"They were too advanced. Someone gave the brothers the skills and it is now our job to find out just who they were. Agents think the sleeper cell has up to a dozen members and has been waiting several years for their day to come."

If that is the case, why are authorities in Boston adamantly insisting that the two brothers were acting alone?

#4 CBS News is reporting that the FBI interviewed Tamerlan Tsarnaev back in 2011. The mother of the two Tsarnaev brothers insists that the FBI had been in contact with them for up to five years. At first, the FBI denied any previous contact with the two suspects. Will we ever learn the true scope of the previous relationship between the FBI and the Tsarnaev brothers?

#5 Debka is reporting that the Tsarnaev brothers were "double agents" which had been "hired by US and Saudi intelligence to penetrate the Wahhabi jihadist networks which, helped by Saudi financial institutions, had spread across the restive Russian Caucasian." Could this possibly be true? If so, will the American people be told the truth about these links?

#6 According to their uncle, there were "mentors" that "radicalized" the Tsarnaev brothers. So precisely who were those "mentors"?

#7 What happened during Tamerlan Tsarnaev's trip to Dagestan and Chechnya last year?

#8 Were the Tsarnaev brothers in contact with a rebel leader named Doku Umarov who is known as "Russia's Bin Laden"?

#9 Did Tamerlan Tsarnaev post a video on YouTube last summer that expresses a belief that the 12th Imam, Mahdi, will soon come and that an Islamic army with black flags will arise out of a province in Iran known as Khorasan?

#10 Why aren't we being told that the "pressure cooker bombs" used in the Boston Marathon attacks are very similar to the kind of pressure cooker bombs that are commonly used in the Middle East?...

The Daily Beast has confirmed with U.S. counter-terrorism officials that the bombs placed Monday at the marathon were made from pressure cookers, a crude kind of explosive favored by insurgents in Pakistan and Afghanistan. A recipe for a bomb that uses the pressure cooker was part of the debut issue of Inspire, the English-language online magazine of al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula.

#11 Initially we were told that Saudi national Abdulrahman Ali Al-Harbi was a "person of interest" in the case. But now he is scheduled to leave the country with the full blessing of the U.S. government. Why is there such a rush to get him out of the United States?

#12 Why aren't we being told that Abdulrahman Ali Al-Harbi was photographed with two other Saudis in the vicinity of the Boston marathon bombings?

#13 Why aren't we being told of the shocking familial links that Abdulrahman Ali Alharbi has to known members of al-Qaeda? The following is from research compiled by Walid Shoebat...

Many from Al-Harbi's clan are steeped in terrorism and are members of Al-Qaeda. Out of a list of 85 terrorists listed by the Saudi government shows several of Al-Harbi clan to have been active fighters in Al-Qaeda:

#15 Badr Saud Uwaid Al-Awufi Al-Harbi

#73 Muhammad Atiq Uwaid Al-Awufi Al-Harbi

#26 Khalid Salim Uwaid Al-Lahibi Al-Harbi

#29 Raed Abdullah Salem Al-Thahiri Al-Harbi

#43 Abdullah Abdul Rahman Muhammad Al-Harbi (leader)

#60 Fayez Ghuneim Humeid Al-Hijri Al-Harbi

Source: <http://aalhameed1.net/vb/showthread.php?t=1565>

Then you have Al-Harbi clan members in Gitmo: Salim Salman Awadallah Al-Sai'di Al-Harbi Majid Abdullah Hussein Al-Harbi Muhammad Abdullah Saqr Al-Alawi Al-Harbi Ghanem Abdul Rahman Ghanem Al-Harbi Muhammad Atiq Uwaid Al-Awfi Al-Harbi Source: <http://www.muslm.net/vb/showthread.php?169019>

There are specific Saudi clans that are rife with members of Al-Qaeda, which makes it quite alarming as to why nearly a hundred thousand student visas are issued to these. Americans are clueless as to clan ties when it comes to terrorism.

#14 Why did U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry have a private meeting with a Saudi foreign minister shortly after Abdulrahman Ali Al-Harbi was identified as a potential suspect?

#15 Why did Barack Obama hold an unscheduled meeting with the ambassador from Saudi Arabia shortly after Abdulrahman Ali Al-Harbi was identified as a potential suspect?

#16 Why did Michelle Obama visit Abdulrahman Ali Al-Harbi in the hospital?

#17 Why did numerous mainstream media outlets openly suggest that "right-wing extremists" were behind the bombings in the immediate aftermath of the attack?

A Surprising Number of Americans Believe in Conspiracy Theories

Written By:
MICHAEL SNYDER

And Most of Them are True....

Have you ever noticed that whenever the government or the mainstream media wants to demonize a particular point of view they call it a “conspiracy theory”? The unspoken message is that normal people such as us should never dare to question the official propaganda being put out by “official sources”. But what if those “official sources” are wrong? What if those “official sources” have a specific agenda that they are trying to promote? Has it become a crime to ask questions? Has it become a crime to think for ourselves? The other day, Public Policy Polling did an opinion poll about “conspiracy theories”. Just by reading the questions they asked, it is obvious that the goal was to make those that believe in those theories to look foolish. When they released the results of the poll, they stated that some of the “conspiracy theories” could only be found in “the darker corners of the internet” – as if there was something unsavory or evil about them. But is it really “crazy” to believe that sometimes bad people do bad things? A conspiracy is just “a secret plan by a group to do something unlawful or harmful”. So do conspiracies ever happen? Of course they happen. They have happened for as long as humanity has existed. But in this day and age, we are just supposed to assume that all of our politicians and all of the big corporations that dominate our society are just sweet and wonderful and would never want to do us any harm whatsoever.

Let’s take a look at some of the results of the Public Policy Polling survey about conspiracy theories. Excerpts from the results are in bold, and my comments follow thereafter...

“Thirty-seven percent of voters believe global warming is a hoax, 51 percent do not. Republicans say global warming is a hoax by a 58-25 margin, Democrats disagree 11-77, and Independents are more split at 41-51. Sixty-one percent of Romney voters believe global warming is a hoax”

The planet has been warming up and cooling down for thousands of years, and most “climate change” can be directly attributed to the gigantic ball of fire that our planet is revolving around. Even if “greenhouse gases” did play a significant role in “climate change”, the truth is that carbon emissions make up less than 5 percent of all greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, and human activity accounts for less than 5 percent of all carbon emissions. So to suggest that “global warming” could ever be significantly influenced by reducing carbon emissions is absolutely laughable.

“Six percent of voters believe Osama bin Laden is still alive”

They rapidly dumped his “dead body” into the ocean and the American public has still never seen any of the pictures that supposedly show that Osama bin Laden is dead. Are we just supposed to trust our politicians when they tell us that the U.S. military killed him? After all, our politicians lie for a living. Plus, the truth is that there is a tremendous amount of evidence that bin Laden died many years before the now famous SEAL team raid on a compound in Pakistan.

“Twenty-eight percent of voters believe secretive power elite with a globalist agenda is conspiring to eventually rule the world through an authoritarian world government, or New World Order. A plurality of Romney voters (38 percent) believe in the New World Order compared to 35 percent who don’t”

Whether you want to call them “the New World Order” or “the Illuminati” or “the global elite”, the truth is that nobody should be able to deny that there are ultra-wealthy individuals that are seeking to dominate the planet. If you doubt this, please see the following article: “Who Runs The World?”

"Twenty percent of voters believe there is a link between childhood vaccines and autism, 51 percent do not"

At one time I didn't believe that there was a link either. But then I started looking into the evidence for myself. Why do they make us feel like criminals for asking questions about this? Is it because it threatens billions of dollars in pharmaceutical company profits? I put a lot of what I learned on this issue into this article: "Vaccines And Autism: The Secret That You Are Not Supposed To Know".

"Nine percent of voters think the government adds fluoride to our water supply for sinister reasons (not just dental health)"

Whatever the intention, the truth is that there is a tremendous amount of evidence that drinking fluoride is very harmful to humans. A number of studies have shown that it actually causes brain damage, and it has been shown to accelerate the growth of cancer. A blog post by Mary Bloomer summarized some of the other reasons why we should avoid fluoride...

- Forty-one percent of kids today have Fluorosis.
- The ADA and the CDC both advise that parents not use fluoridated water to make infant formula. Fluoride is used as an insecticide and a rat poison. There's plenty of fluoride in the food we eat! A toddler gets as much fluoride in their system as a 250-pound man.
- Toothpastes have warnings "keep away from children under 6 years – if you swallow more than is allowed for brushing, contact a poison control center immediately" (Ever watch a little kid brush their teeth?)
- Sodium fluorine (fluoride) is one of the basic ingredients in PROZAC® and Sarin nerve gas (yes, you read that right!)
- Hitler added fluoride to the water of concentration camps to induce compliance in prisoners.

- Fluoride increases your absorption of aluminum (a neurotoxin). Large amounts of aluminum are found in the brains of Alzheimer patients.

"Fifty-one percent of voters say a larger conspiracy was at work in the JFK assassination, just 25 percent say Oswald acted alone"

Does anyone actually still believe that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone? Even though a majority of the American people now believe that there was a larger conspiracy at work in that assassination, the government and the media are still sticking to their story.

"Five percent believe exhaust seen in the sky behind airplanes is actually chemicals sprayed by the government for sinister reasons"

Do you see how they worded that question? The exhaust trails that normal aircraft leave behind are called "contrails", and they usually disappear within moments. "Chemtrails" are something else entirely. Once they are sprayed in the air, they can often remain up there for hours. But apparently we aren't supposed to notice the huge white lines that crisscross the sky right above our heads. The only real debate about chemtrails should be about what their purpose is. Are they being used for weather modification projects or is something more sinister happening?

"Fifteen percent of voters think the medical industry and the pharmaceutical industry 'invent' new diseases to make money"

The pharmaceutical industry may not be inventing diseases just to make money, but they sure do love to invent new reasons to get people hooked on their legal drugs. The sad truth is that the American people are the most doped up people on the face of the planet. The following are some facts about pharmaceutical drugs from my recent article entitled "50 Signs That The U.S. Health Care System Is A Gigantic Money Making Scam"...

- During 2013, Americans will spend more than 280 billion dollars on prescription drugs.
- Prescription drugs cost about 50 percent more in the United States than they do in other countries.
- In the U.S. today, prescription painkillers kill more Americans than heroin and cocaine combined.
- Nearly half of all Americans now use prescription drugs on a regular basis according to the CDC. Not only that, the CDC also says that approximately one-third of all Americans use two or more pharmaceutical drugs on a regular basis, and more than ten percent of all Americans use five or more pharmaceutical drugs on a regular basis.

- The percentage of women taking antidepressants in America is higher than in any other country in the world.
- In 2010, the average teen in the U.S. was taking 1.2 central nervous system drugs. Those are the kinds of drugs which treat conditions such as ADHD and depression.
- Children in the United States are three times more likely to be prescribed antidepressants as children in Europe are.

- There were more than two dozen pharmaceutical companies that made over a billion dollars in profits during 2008.

- According to the CDC, approximately three quarters of a million people a year are rushed to emergency rooms in the United States because of adverse reactions to pharmaceutical drugs.

As you can see, there are usually at least two sides to every story.

So the next time someone tries to dismiss a particular viewpoint by dismissing it as a "conspiracy theory" just because it does not conform to the official propaganda being put out by the U.S. government and the mainstream media, perhaps you should say something.

We are living at a time when it is more important than ever to think for ourselves. Our world is becoming increasingly unstable, and there are lots of people out there that want to tell us what we should believe.

Do not allow the government and the media to do your thinking for you. That is the lazy way out, and it will only end in a whole lot of pain.

Question everything.

Do your own research and come to your own conclusions.

The truth is out there, but you are going to have to unplug from "the matrix" in order to find it.

How “Kill The Pigs” Became “Only The Police Should Have Guns”

written by: Jon Rappoport

In the fabled 1960s, the cops were called pigs, and anybody on the political Left who wanted a ticket to the show knew that and mouthed it often. Now, on the Left, that tradition has morphed into: repeal the Second Amendment; turn in your guns; citizens with guns are satanic; the police will protect us; a private citizen with a gun is a killer and needs psychiatric lockdown; suspend that 5-year old with the gun screensaver. What happened?

At rallies, protests, and riots, people said: are the pigs here yet? I heard they were three blocks away. Wonder how many pigs they're sending today? There! There they are! The pigs!

Now, on the Left, that tradition has morphed into: repeal the 2nd Amendment; turn in your guns; citizens with guns are satanic; the police will protect us; a private citizen with a gun is a killer and needs psychiatric lockdown; suspend that five-year old with the gun screen-saver.

What happened?

In 1968, if you asked a leftie college student whether a black man living in the inner city had a right to own a gun to protect himself against the cops, the answer, ten out of ten times, would have been yes.

Now, that leftie kid will be talking about the insanity of anybody owning a gun. Except for the cops.

Well, three things have happened since the 1960s. The end of the military draft, and the end of anybody caring who smokes pot or who has sex with who. Those changes melted away the whole “movement.”

A professor friend taught at UCLA during the turbulent 60s and early 70s. He told me as soon as the Vietnam war was over, the campus transformed in a flash. Students were suddenly all about finding a niche in the job market after graduation. Boom. Switch on, switch off.

The titanic idealism was put away in a drawer and filed under “crazy shit I did.”

The one remaining piece from the 60s that has endured is hatred of big corporations. But gradually, a parallel mindset has developed. First, grudging acceptance of big government; then toleration; then admiration.

Now, the Left is all about big government and the “positive changes” it can make.

And when I say the Left, I also mean the center, and a great deal of the right, because they've come along for the ride, too. They are the Left now.

In 1968, a big-time liberal presidential candidate, Hubert Humphrey, was the target of riots, by the Left, at the Democratic National Convention. Those riots tore apart half the city. Two years earlier, a march, by the Left, on the Century Plaza Hotel in LA, where Democratic President Lyndon Johnson was staying, sealed his fate. It was the last stone. Johnson, who had presided over the war on poverty and the creation of “The Great Society,” the biggest federal program since FDR's New Deal, was mangled into oblivion.

Johnson announced he wouldn't run for office again in 1968.

If Pelosi, Reid, Frank, and Obama had been around then, they would have been hammered in the same way by the Left. If they were for the war in Vietnam.

That was the big key, the war. Or to be precise, the military draft.

“Hey, hey, LBJ, how many kids did you kill today?!”

Meaning: “I won't risk my neck going to Nam!”

The elite Left has become the personification of the soccer mom now. Worries about everything. Danger everywhere. Needs more helmets. Schedules more play dates. Wants more state surveillance. “If you're against intrusion on your privacy, maybe you have something to hide.” “Keep the poor bottled up in inner cities, give them anything they want, just don't let them into my neighborhood.”

The Left has also become the promise of a vague fairyland new age. “We're all in this together.” “We can raise up the lowest among us (by printing more money).”

And the police are part of that fantasy. They're the centurions at the gate. “Arm them to the teeth.” “Render the rest of us powerless.” That's the grand solution to all our social ills. Naked, hairless, unarmed, watched around the clock, we'll be beautifully safe, under the machine of a national police force.

You think I'm attacking a straw man here? You think I'm devising a distorted picture of the collectivist Left and their allies? You think there's some still-powerful rebellion, on the political Left, against the State, that can put a million people on the street to protest a specific fascist program of that big power? Where is it?

What was it, really, even in 1968? If the Vietnam war had been fought with no draft, with a volunteer army, a large part of the 1960s wouldn't have happened at all.

As the 1970s droned on into the 80s, a rapprochement was achieved between the citizens and the police. More and more, the Left came to believe the whole idea of rebellion against the State was an old delusion. It was something people like Camus and Sartre had written about. It was really a European thing, an abstract philosophical pose.

Once the dust and the smelly underwear of the 1960s had been cleared away, the real State Op came into being. Encourage, in every way possible, crime and criminals; and then come in behind that with an answer to the horrific threat: cops.

Irresistible. On the streets, in the newspapers, on television, enact crime after crime after crime... and then promote the only answer: cops. More cops. More cops with bigger and better weapons.

Disarm everybody and leave the police and the FBI and the military and numerous other government agencies with the only guns.

Does this excuse the actual perpetrators of street crimes? No, of course not. In fact, it makes them more guilty, because they're aiding and abetting a much larger plan. I'm not here to excuse a man who picks up a gun and shoots somebody. I'm spelling out context:

Seed the whole country with violence-inducing toxic psychiatric drugs and you will get plenty of crime. Which is exactly what has happened. All the way from Ritalin (cheap speed) to the SSRI antidepressants, to the brain-hammer anti-psychotics, the drug companies and their allied psychiatrists have been creating killings.

Allow American street gangs to work for Mexican and Colombian drug cartels, while providing those cartels with U.S. government protection as they sell tons of heroin, cocaine and crack all over the country, and you will get plenty of crime.

Pour billions of dollars into "rehabilitating" inner cities and stand by while the money disappears and is stolen, dedicate funds to programs that have no chance of working, stop genuine grass roots movements to build vast urban farms and provide free food and a sense of community, and you will get plenty of crime.

These and other strategies are the actions of a war to expand crime, to necessitate massive intervention by the State. This is an Op.

Our current leader, after similar mouthpieces like Bush and Clinton, is the one man who couldn't possibly be on board with the Op. Barack Obama. He couldn't possibly be doing his part to destabilize the whole society. He couldn't. Which is exactly why he is the president of the United States now. Because he seems to stand for something better. But he doesn't. He is definitely part of the Op.

But if he really did stand for something better, he could do several things, by executive order, that would detonate a real revolution in this country. Three crazy wild out-of-left field things, just for starters.

Declare and wage an all-out war on drug cartels and their sub-contracted domestic gangs.

Kick off a huge—and I mean huge—genuine urban farming program in every city in America. Free, clean, non-GMO food for the poor, grown by the poor, shared by the poor. The ramifications of such a program, carried out swiftly, would be astonishing on every level.

And attack, with a vengeance, Big Pharma and their psychiatric drugs.

The baffled response to such a program illustrates just how deep the brainwashing in this country goes.

And some people would say, "If Obama stood up and did those things, he'd be killed tomorrow."

That's getting us closer to the truth. But it would be senseless to stand up alone. He would need allies. Lots of them. Where would he find them? (Assuming he would launch this three-pronged program...a ludicrous assumption.)

Would he meet with Pelosi, Frank, Reid, Hillary, Boehner, Paul Ryan, Rubio, Rachel Maddow, Rush Limbaugh....

Where in the familiar circles of power would any president find allies to turn things around?

Nowhere.

And that's exactly why rebellion against the State isn't just some old crusty abstract idea.

That's why decentralization of power in America, at all levels, is THE counter-agenda. Intentional communities, nullification of unconstitutional federal laws, boycotts against corporations like Monsanto, alternative news sources, growing your own food, local parents threatening school boards to back off forcing psychiatric drugs down the throats of their children, home schooling, etc., etc.

Rendering every citizen weaponless, while at the same time giving the police every possible weapon and surveillance tool, is a solution in the same way that closing your eyes and jumping into a big barrel and pulling down the lid over your head is a solution.

Three hundred million barrels with TV sets and smart phones is exactly what the State Corporatists are pushing.

The political Left promoted rebellion against the State as long as they saw themselves outside in the cold. But when they began to realize that they were, in fact, becoming the State, with all the power of the federal government, they dropped the idea of genuine rebellion like a hot potato. They praised big government, they assured everybody it was the solution, not the problem.

They shed bottom-up revolution because they were top-down.

There are lots of old Lefties who have been working to stop GMOs. When Obama signed the Monsanto Protection Act the other day, they paused and pondered. They began to realize they've been caught in a squeeze play. Their man, the president, isn't who they thought he was. Not at all.

This disaffection is a familiar theme: outsiders feel solidarity in their revolution; then their leaders become insiders; then the ideals vanish, leaving the foot soldiers in the lurch.

"RENDERING EVERY CITIZEN WEAPONLESS, WHILE AT THE SAME TIME GIVING THE POLICE EVERY POSSIBLE WEAPON AND SURVEILLANCE TOOL, IS A SOLUTION IN THE SAME WAY THAT CLOSING YOUR EYES AND JUMPING INTO A BIG BARREL AND PULLING DOWN THE LID OVER YOUR HEAD IS A SOLUTION."

'World War Z' Scene Changed to Please Chinese Censors

A scene from the new Brad Pitt movie "World War Z" had to be changed so as not to offend Chinese state censors, just one of numerous recent examples where American movies are being amended in order to please China's ruling Communist Party leaders.

"In the offending scene, characters debate the geographic origin of an outbreak that caused a zombie apocalypse and point to China," a Paramount executive told TheWrap.

Paramount ordered the movie's producers to choose a different country and redo the scene so as not to upset Chinese censors and threaten distribution in China, the fastest growing film market in the world.

This is by no means the first example of American movie producers being told to edit out negative portrayals of China in order to please Communist Party censors.

"While China has loosened its restrictions on the number of foreign films that can screen in the country, its film board continues to wield a great deal of influence, causing unprecedented changes in plots, release strategies, casting and other elements of Hollywood production," writes Lucas Shaw.

Concerns that China was interfering in U.S. media were also heard after MGM was forced to delay the remake of "Red Dawn" for two years after Chinese state media complained that depicting the invading villains as Chinese "would demonize their state and its citizens." The bad guys were changed to North Koreans and entire portions of the film had to be revised.

The filmmakers were forced to set about, "digitally erasing Chinese flags and military symbols from "Red Dawn," substituting dialogue and altering the film to depict much of the invading force as being from North Korea, an isolated country where American media companies have no dollars at stake," reported the L.A. Times.

An alternate version of "Iron Man 3" has also been produced to cater to Chinese audiences as a way of satisfying Communist Party censors.

Large chunks of several movies released last year were also cut by censors, including 40 minutes from "Cloud Atlas" and 12 minutes from "Men in Black 3." All scenes taking place in Chinatown were excised.

A scene from the latest James Bond franchise Skyfall that depicted a Chinese security guard being assassinated was also scrubbed.

The 1984 movie "The Karate Kid" was also censored at the behest of Communist Party officials, who expressed displeasure at one of the villains being Chinese, leading to 12 minutes of the film being cut.

Last year, Chinese company Wanda purchased AMC, the second-largest theater chain in the U.S., increasing fears that the Chinese Communist Party was expanding its influence globally as part of a media takeover.

"Beijing is investing heavily in projecting its 'soft power,' or cultural influence, by boosting Chinese state media's presence abroad, including the USA, where the Chinese government has also run advertisements in New York's Times Square," reported USA Today.

Stanley Rosen, director of USC's East Asian Studies Center, said the Communist Party remained "hyper-sensitive to anything that puts China in a bad light."

While Chinese censors deleting scenes for their own domestic propaganda purposes is one thing, the fact that American movie studios are self-censoring films before they're even viewed by Communist Party officials illustrates how draconian Chinese media censorship is already being applied to American audiences.
